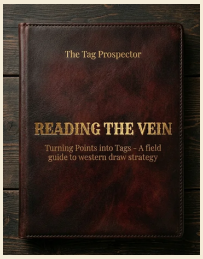
THE PROSPECTOR'S LEDGER

The Tag Prospector's Draw Doctrine · Two titles available now

The Prospector's Ledger is a line of plain-spoken strategy books for the western big game hunter, written in Point-Creep Percival's voice. Doctrine you read at the kitchen table, not in the field. Each one takes decades of draw data and turns it into moves you can actually make with the points in your pocket.

Where to buy, and why it matters.

Both titles are available directly from The Tag Prospector and on Amazon Kindle. Buying direct keeps more of the price with the small outfit that produced the work, and it gets you the PDF edition, which holds the designed page, the full-size charts, and the print-ready worksheets that a reflowable e-reader cannot carry. The Kindle editions are there for readers who would rather have it on the device in their pocket. Direct links to both are below.



Reading the Vein

Turning Points Into Tags.

Nineteen named "Plays," each one a draw strategy scored on the Hunt Quality Score, across Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, Utah, and Wyoming, plus a Colorado 2028 bonus chapter. Every play carries an honest confidence read: LOCK, LIKELY, or LONGSHOT.

The Point Creep Reckoning

Demographics, Points Decay, and Hunter Attrition.

Where is point creep actually headed, and does the wait have an end? 128 pages and 28 original charts across the same five states. The finding most hunters miss: the points floor is a step, not a slope, and the number that moves first is the count of people standing on it.

More titles are in the works, on the units and seasons where the arithmetic gets interesting. New to the western draw? Start with The Zero to One Report. It is free, and it is a curated list of confirmed draw opportunities you can reach at zero and one points across all five states.
